Your Personal Information and the Union

Penrose and St. Francis hospitals protect your personal and confidential information, and would never share it with anyone unless required to by law. If a union filed for an election to represent employees, the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) would require us to give some of your personal information to both the union and the NLRB.

By law, we would be required to submit this information to the union and the NLRB.

The union may use this information to contact you, possibly by phone, text message or by visiting your home. Penrose and St. Francis hospitals are not able to control how a union will use your personal information. If the union won an election at one of our hospitals, it could also receive access to your employee file.

We regret any intrusion into your private lives and would prefer to keep your personal information confidential. Again, we would never share this information unless required to by law.
